advise for prosecutors serving in the trenches. Still an interesting read and reminder of the high ethical duties of a prosecutor. 3 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Excellent book by an dedicated crime fighter By B. Harris This is an excellent book by one of Colorado's most dedicated crime fighters. Throughout the book Mr. Suthers uses many examples and stories from his personal involvement in fighting some of Colorado's most infamous cases to illustrate his points. While some of his stories are sad and even shocking, others have a humorous side. On each page Mr. Suthers' dedication to fighting crime and his conviction that public safety is government's most important responsibility resonates clear. 4 of 8 people found the following review helpful. Too Self righteous By Hackney The author's Catholic background has heavily influenced his analysis. The author is a politician who merely supervises cases. He is not a prosecutor therefore he hits the basics but his book has no depth.

"A balanced critique of the justice system." Steven Carter, former Indiana attorney general Demystifying the powerful role of public prosecutors in the United States, John Suthers draws on more than thirty years experience as a prosecutor in his exploration of this public office, even tackling some controversial calls for reform.

No Higher Calling is a book that prosecutors should read: the rest of us should read it to become better-versed in the issues faced by our prosecutors at every level. Suthers' experience at the local, state, and federal prosecution levels qualify him to dispense advice that can help prosecutors (particularly a relatively-inexperienced prosecutor) understand what the job should really be about. Suthers is determined to do justice and explains the difficult decisions that can be involved in determining what justice means in a particular case. --The Houston Lawyer, February 2009 "Suthers, a former prosecutor who authored the book "No Higher Calling, No Greater Responsibility," could be one of the most talented and passionate lawmen in the country." -- Colorado Springs Gazette About the Author John W. Suthers has spent his 30-year legal career in the U.S. justice system, serving as an elected district attorney, a presidentially appointed U.S. attorney, and as Colorado's attorney general. He also ran Colorado's correctional system from 1999 until 2001.
