Robin Ellison : Pensions: Europe and Equality (Longman Pensions Report) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Pensions: Europe and Equality (Longman Pensions Report):

Practitioners involved in pensions work should find this report helpful when dealing with problems of achieving equality in pension schemes. Potential solutions to these problems are described, with analysis of the downside in funding terms of the solutions. The book summarizes the position of equal treatment in pensions schemes. It also examines important topics related to harmonization of benefits, including retirement ages, the difficulties in introducing equal treatment, EC legislation, race discrimination, benefits and contributions and also age discrimination. The report looks into the issues involved in the "Barber" case and the judgment given by the European court of Justice in this and subsequently in "Coloroll". The appendices contain necessary supporting material, including the text of the "Barter" and "Coloroll" judgments and the Equal Treatment Directives on Social Security.

... the study will surely serve as an instant and invaluable resource for those working in this developing field.... a timely and thorough work. Pensions World on the first edition
