Gordon Exall : Periodical Payments: The New Law: A Special Bulletin (Special Bulletin (Jordans)) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Periodical Payments: The New Law: A Special Bulletin (Special Bulletin (Jordans)):

The power of UK courts to impose periodical payments was introduced in April 2005 by the Courts Act 2003. Periodical payments may be imposed in any case involving future loss, and has not been restricted to high value cases.

The potential impact of these reforms is great, but how the courts will use this new power is uncertain. However, all practitioners dealing with cases involving future loss must be prepared to deal with periodical payments. This timely special bulletin explains the new UK law and procedure, and provides sample pleading and schedule of damages, together with up-to-date versions of all relevant statutory materials.

About the Author Gordon Exall originally qualified as a solicitor and was called to the Bar in 1991. Gordon is former Executive Committee Member of the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers and author of Munkman on Damages for Personal Injury and Death; Periodical Payments: The New Law and The APIL Guide to Fatal Accidents.
